Summer Courses

The Graduate School offers two courses, GSAS 901c and GSAS 902c, to support summer training through practical internships. Students will register for these courses as part of the internship approval process and not through the typical online or paper registration processes.

GSAS 901c Pre-Candidacy Applied Research Experience Allegra di Bonaventura

The purpose of this course is to provide students with the opportunity to gain practical experience in research. This experience provides a basis for developing a dissertation thesis prospectus that addresses significant research questions. Students work with a faculty mentor to select a suitable placement for the summer internship. A one-page description of the student's research plan will be submitted to the DGS at least three weeks prior to starting the program, for approval within two weeks. Upon completion of the internship, a written report of the work must be submitted to the DGS no later than October 1. Prerequisite: completion of one year of the Ph.D. program; approval of DGS

(1 credit; Sat/Unsat)

GSAS 902c Post-Candidacy Applied Research Experience Allegra di Bonaventura

The purpose of this course is to provide students with the opportunity to perform dissertation research or to gain practical experience using the methodology or results of their dissertation research. Students work with a faculty mentor to select a suitable placement for the summer internship, and submit a one-page description of the student's research plan to the student's dissertation adviser and DGS at least three weeks prior to starting the program, for approval within two weeks. Upon completion of the internship, a written report of the work must be submitted to the adviser and DGS no later than October 1. Prerequisite: completion of one year of the Ph.D. and Admission to Candidacy; approval of dissertation adviser and DGS (1 credit; Sat/Unsat)
